

Preface and Disclaimer

The Rhino – fast becoming extinct through losing the only place that they have survived for many years. The human race continues to invade their grasslands to spread out and conquer vast wildernesses in order to make them their own. And in so doing, our wild animals are losing where they live, love, and bring up their young. If a neighbour marched in one day and just destroyed our house without our permission or being given a valid reason why, we would be upset. But that is exactly what is happening to our beloved animals throughout the world. Man is taking away the forests, the trees, the fruit off the trees. Man is invading vast tracks of jungle for their own personal gain. Some even go to the extent of depriving these very same animals of some parts of their body. Until very soon, we will only read about animals that lived during and before our time. I hope this book serves you to find out about the Rhinoceros and put into your heart some feeling about this animal who only does its best to survive in the world that we now live in.

* * * * *

While some of the pictures are my own and all content is my own, please contact me should there be a discretion that you would like me to fix and we can fix it quickly. Links to all outside material are always at the back.

Any quotes from actual text on pages I wanted to include in my references are in the colour blue so that you can distinguish between my thoughts and the thoughts of others who actually provided me with the insight as to what I wanted to include in my own book.

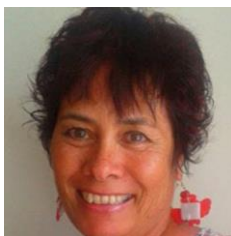

Watch out for more from me in other areas.

As usual, my email address for correspondence, criticisms or just some love from you is stories4debbie@gmail.com.

Kind regards

Debbie Nicholson

25 April 2019

Debbie Nicholson